modes, and common misconceptions, was provided to students. The presentation addressed prevalent stigma and discrimination against individuals living with HIV/AIDS, emphasizing the importance of empathy, compassion, and support.

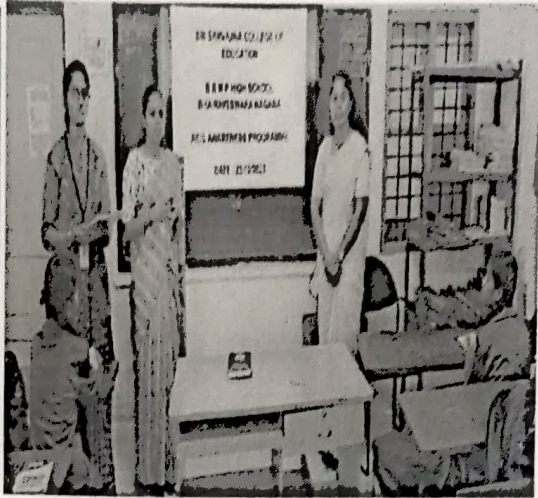

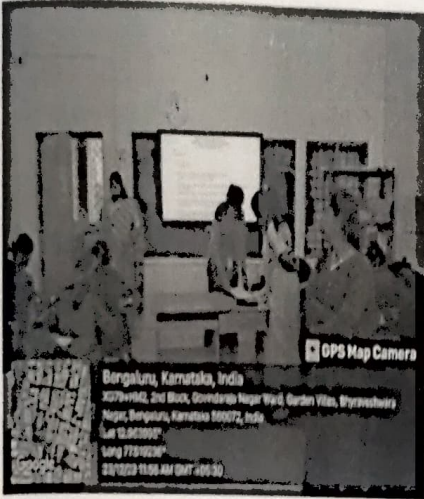

A video PowerPoint presentation was created, incorporating informative content, real-life stories, and interactive elements to engage school children effectively. Many students exhibited a significant increase in knowledge and awareness about HIV/AIDS, particularly regarding transmission, prevention, and stigma reduction. There was a noticeable shift in attitudes among students, with many expressing greater empathy and understanding towards individuals living with HIV/AIDS.

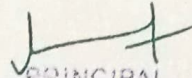

The awareness programme conducted by student teachers of Sri Sarvajna College of Education during their internship program proved to be a significant step towards combating HIV/AIDS stigma and misinformation among school children. Through an informative and interactive presentation, students were not only educated about the facts of HIV/AIDS but also inspired to become advocates for compassion, empathy, and support.
